Project Managers are in demand

By 2027, U.S. Employers will need 8.8 million individuals working in project management oriented roles.

A career in project management offers an opportunity to leverage your leadership and management skills, perfected while serving your country, into a rewarding new career path.

Get started today

Getting started is half the battle and PMI suggests following these steps:

1. Take an inventory of your acquired skills and competencies. Translate those skills into business terminology.
2. Consider a PMI certification to distinguish yourself and get recognition for your knowledge and experience.
3. Network with people in the profession.
4. Find a mentor who successfully transitioned from the Military.
5. Focus on building your network.
6. Leverage your transition assistance programs (TAP) and career resources.
